Learning Points

Describing People

To describe someone, you use adjectives.

Adjectives are words that describe a person.

If two adjectives describe a person, use and to link the adjectives.

If there are more than two adjectives, use commas, then use and before the last adjective.

Examples:

- The kind girl.
- The kind girl is short and blonde.
- He is tall, smart and handsome.

Short Vowel Sounds

A short vowel happens when a vowel is followed by a consonant. A vowel is usually short when there is only one vowel in a word. For example: cat or dog.

The most common sound for each vowel is its "short" sound:

- the a sound as in apple, can, or mat
- the e sound as in elephant, leg, or rent
- the i sound as in insect, pin, or lift
- the o sound as in ostrich, October, or motto
- the u sound as in umbrella, pun, or uncle
